TO: C.O., X-2 Germany
SUBJECT: Lt. Alfred PIPP Interrogation Report Appendix A:-
Relations between Leitstelle II Sud-Ost and Other Intelligence Agencies.

1. Relations with RSHA Amt VI E.

The first contact of PIPP with Amt VI E was at the beginning of September 1944. At that time PIPP went to PRATSCH's office in order to obtain authorisation for Leitstelle II Sud-Ost to recruit agents from irredentist political groups in south east Europe such as the Iron Guard. This authorisation was necessary because Amt VI was responsible for political espionage outside Germany. This first interview was very short but PIPP obtained what he asked.

Toward the end of November 1944 or the beginning of December PIPP received an order from FECHNER to contact the Roumanian Referat of VI E which was working in the same area. In fact, the order had come from higher levels to remain in contact with Amt VI. From that time on PIPP remained more or less in contact with Referat Roumania and with AUMER. He limited his visits to a minimum because he had the impression that AUMER wanted to obtain as much information as possible on the operations of the Leitstelle in order to take over its agents for himself. PIPP claims further that he went so far as to re-write the agents' telegrams, of which he was obliged to show a copy to AUMER, in order to protect vital information. In practice there were certain contacts between the nets of Amt VI E and those of the Leitstelle simply because the agents of the two services had been recruited from members of the Iron Guard or from similar organisations and because the agents knew each other more or less. This contact, however, never achieved a co-ordination of effort at the commanding level. Once only a telegram arrived at the Leitstelle through AUMER. The station LOPA operating in Roumania was temporarily unable to transmit and established contact through the W/T transmitter of Referat Roumania of Amt VI.

VI E left Vienna about 30 March, that is, a little before the Leitstelle. On 6 April PIPP received a telegram from AUMER who asked him to come to see him at his new location at KLAUSMUESTER. There he met PRATSCH, LIEBHARDT and others. They told him they had received orders that they alone had the right to work in Roumania. Consequently, they asked for direct liaison with PINKAS, the new head of the Leitstelle, and they informed him the execution of action "P" would not be urgent, until the receipt of new orders. In a radio room, LIEBHARDT took PIPP to Weisz radio station located in the town of Klausmuester and put him in contact with the radio operator. He later said that the question of radio liaison could be decided practically. PIPP proposed to the operator that code name be used. This code, which is in fact PIFF also says that the Leitstelle had no radio equipment of its own and he had to make a certain payment to maintain it as his, but had never made a certain payment which would release so that contact never took place. What happened was that they were never able to decipher the telegrams sent by PIFF (the Leitstelle station).

PIFF evidently does not have pleasant memories of his relations with AUNER whom he describes as the evil spirit of VII B. Brutal and selfish, ready for anything because he had captured the mentality of those who have lost everything (the rapid advance of the Russians had obliged him to leave his wife and child in Roumania where he had no hope of returning). AUNER called the officers of the Leitstelle "men of 20 July". He was always trying to obtain as much information as possible from PIFF without ever providing any himself. It was not until somewhat later and at PIFF's insistence that he agreed to furnish a certain amount of information of a political nature to the Leitstelle.

2. Relations with the Wehrmachtfuehrungstab and Mil Amt D

PIFF believes that the Leitstelle depended directly from the Wehrmachtfuehrungstab Abteilung FA, at first under the orders of Oberst NAUMANN, then in December 1944 under Oberst BUNTRÖCK. He has never heard of Mil Amt F and evidently does not know that Oberst BUNTRÖCK was its head. He lists as other members of this Abteilung FA of the Wehrmachtfuehrungstab: Oberstleutnant Von den KNESEDECK, Oberstleutnant GLIDEMISTER, Major LINKS (in fact all members of Mil Amt F). Concerning Mil Amt D, PIFF says that as far as he knows they had no direct relations with this department, but that Mil Amt D had a "fachliches weisungrecht" vis-a-vis the Wehrmachtfuehrungstab, that is the right to give technical advice on operations which came within the sphere of this department.

3. Relations with Kommando des Meldogebiet Vienna.

PIFF personally had to make contact with KdM Vienna from its beginnings with the Leitstelle. In fact the agents of operation REGULUS were to be trained at BREITENFUNK in a center which belonged to the KdM. For this particular question PIFF was in contact with KELLESINK. By order of FECHNER, PIFF also established contact with Oberstleutnant SCHUBERT, chief of operations of the KdM, to whom he was to pass on military intelligence collected by agents of the Leitstelle. PIFF was also in contact with Oberstleutnant PHOKOP who was especially concerned with questions dealing with Roumania at the KdM. The only help received from the KdM consisted in furnishing food for the offices and food for the headquarters. These contacts lasted until the departure from Vienna.

4. Relations with # Jagdverbaende.

The # Jagdverbaende Süd-Ost had a geographical and operational sphere very similar to that of the Leitstelle. Communication has always been frequent and serious, especially when the possibility of invasion is taken into consideration.

By the end of October 1944 # Untersturmführer

PIFF was in close contact with the Leitstelle II Sud-Ost. This Leitstelle never maintained relations with the SD or the Sicherheitspolizei and came to the conclusion that the agents of PIFF were not part of the SD and did not engage in any sabotage activity. In the end PIFF made no effort in trying to dismiss the Leitstelle.

5. Relations with Nachrichten Regiment 506.

It is this unit which was charged with the training of the radio agents of the Leitstelle. For this question PIFF established contact at first with Oberstleutnant HORNIG, later replaced by Hauptmann MARCHICHEK. In addition, after the agents were placed, it was Nachrichten Regiment 506 who maintained the radio contact with them and who furnished them before their departure with the transmitting and receiving sets with which they were to operate. The centres which monitored the agents of the Leitstelle included KHM and the two sub-stations FELD and WALE, and later JAHN. Nachrichten Regiment 506 was installed in VIKTOR STUBENBAUER in the same building and on the same floor as the Leitstelle.

6. Relations with the Wehrwolf.

During March a telegram arrived at the Leitstelle from an authority unknown to PIFF and which ordered FECHNER to establish relations with the NSDAP of Vienna with the object of the eventual absorption of the Leitstelle into framework of the Wehrwolf. This order was purposely disregarded.

Conclusion

This interrogation of PIFF was made not only to clear up certain aspects of the activity of Leitstelle II Sud-Ost but also to enable us to decide what was the nature of the relations of PIFF with the RSHA. In fact PIFF was considered by certain of his colleagues as having particularly close relations with the SD and even of being the SD representative within the Leitstelle. PIFF denies having any other relations with the SD than those necessitated by his service or by order of FECHNER. The simple fact that because of his duties he was in fairly close contact with RSHA Amt VI is sufficient to explain these rumours. In addition the interrogation of AUER on his relations with Leitstelle Sud-Ost and PIFF confirms the statements of PIFF.
